UNPUBLISHED RESEARCH

(1986-1987). An exploratory search of loneliness on Taylor University's campus as measured by the UCLA Revised Loneliness Scale and interpretation. Presentation given to the Student Development staff.

(1992-1996). A qualitative examination of the "Taylor Experience" as perceived by faculty and students on Taylor University's campus. The data were analyzed in a variety of different ways, including both quantitative and qualitative methods. No formal presentation was made Dallal, L. & Lund, J. (1993). Social climate and university residence environments: Corridor vs. non-traditional dormitories. No formal presentation was made.

(1998-1999). A review of the literature on loneliness has been conducted with the assistance of two students. The research has been discontinued for this fall because the student assistant chose not to return to Taylor this fall. However, we will pursue this topic in the Spring when the student research assistant returns. The literature review is in preparation of the replication and extension of the research conducted in 1986-1987 on Taylor's campus. We would like to extend the research, considering other variables which may correlate with our measures of loneliness. Also, we are considering a comparative study with other CCCU schools.
