

“Through my classes at Taylor, I discovered how I could honor the image of God in people when I told their story. Nothing has motivated me more in my career as a journalist. On the student newspaper, I learned to listen and empathize as I was reporting a heart-breaking story. As a working journalist, I’ve taken the same care with those sorts of interviews as I have when I’ve interviewed presidential candidates or top CEOs.”

—Chrissie Thompson Fink TU ‘08
Education Editor, The Associated Press

“While at Taylor University, I dreamed of one day working for a large news organization covering international current events, but doubted the possibility of that dream coming into fruition. On one occasion, I recall sitting in Dr. Blanchard’s office and him telling me, ‘You could be the next Christiane Amanpour, the chief international anchor for CNN.’ I carry that encouragement along with countless bites of wisdom and support from Dr. Blanchard with me to this day.”

WHO WE ARE

Telling compelling stories via audio, print and video! The Multimedia Journalism degree program at Taylor University prepares students to lead and serve as advocates for justice and truth-telling. Some will answer the call to work as reporters, editors and producers in broadcast TV/radio news, magazines, newspapers, or online media. Others will be led to use their multimedia talents serving in Christian, nonprofit, business or academic organizations.

Exciting hands-on learning opportunities include classes like: Intro and Advanced Media Writing, Sports Writing, Magazine Production & Feature Writing, Politics & Opinion Writing, Digital Photography, Audio & Video Production, Layout & Design, and Video Storytelling.

Learn from professors who have solid professional media experience.

Practice your multimedia skills on The Echo newspaper and online campus media.

Meet alumni and media professionals who want to help you succeed.
